Upstream Advance

Paul's letter to the church in Ephesus is brimming with evidences of his fatherly love. His thinking has been so thoroughly overhauled by the perfection of God's revealed love that all he can picture is the church being a model of the Kingdom way of living which is in painfully sharp contrast to the current value system of his culture, including his own church family. His sense of urgency in this regard is on display in every subject he addresses. He brings his admonishings to a close by focusing on what he considers the most important topic of them all, the need to live acutely aware of the permanent, harsh reality of warfare in the life of every believer.
